VAN SANTVOORD ON THE RACK. BOTH HE AND MR. CONKLING GET EXCITED.

A PROSPECT THAT THE CROSS-EXAMINATION WILL SOON BE FINISHED.

Cornelius Van Santvoord, the white-haired lawyer who drew Jesse Hoyt's will, entered the Surrogate's Court at 2 p. m. yesterday to subject himself again to ex-Senator Conkling's cross-examination. He were a spring overcent of comfortable proportions, carwore a spring overcent of comfortable proportions, cal-ried a large silk umbrella, and kept his silk hat on until he found himself in a hard-bottomed witness-chair. He had before occupied a chair with a cushion, but he sternly informed Crier Hastings that he would no longer use that seat; he desired to be on a solid foundation so that Mr. Conkling might introduce no dynamite beneath him.

Mr. Conkling appeared in the most genial humor. After laying aside his Derby hat, and inducing the crier to take his umbrella under the assurance that it was dry, Mr. Conkling greeted United States District-Attorney Root and Mrs. Helen Maria Hoyt, and then leaned over the railing in a confidential manner toward Mr. Van Santvoord, whereupon this conversation ensued:

Mr. Conkling-Well, Mr. Van Santvoord, how do you nd yourself to-day!
Mr. Van Santvoord (smiling)—Oh, I am myself again.
Mr. Conkling (persuasively) A fine day.
Mr. Van Santvoord—Yes, fine growing weather.

Ee-Judge Shipman, John Ordronau and Aaron Kahn had meanwhile formed into battle array at the Surrogate's right, and Mr. Root and Joseph Kanzman took their posts behind two gripsacks and a silk hat. The Surrogate took his seat, and at the same time Miss Mary Irene Hoyt, with her female relative. These two with Mrs. Hoyt and two other women all in mourning formed a continuous line behind the lawyers. William M. Evarts was not

MR. VAN SANTVOORD STILL ON THE STAND. The witness first informed the court that he had supplied himself with a list of dates with which to refresh his memory. Jesse Hoyt in 1870, he said, was worth probably $2,500,000. About all the witness knew of Samuel Hoyt was that he lived in Brooklyn. Samuel Hoyt had been summoned to Mrs. Helen Maria Hoyt's house on August 18, 1892, the day after the funeral, because he had leisure to go. Alfred M. Hoyt was not asked because he was occupied in business.

eause he was occupied in business.

Mr. Conkling—Then your only reason is that Samuel was a man of leisure, while Alfred was not i Mr. Van Santyoord (excitedly)—Well, I might say so, if it were not an impertinence; that's about it; but I find that I have said a great many things here which have displeased those people, and I don't want to run any more such risks.

Mr. Conkling (southingly)—That is not at all impertinent. You simply mean that Samuel was more sympathetic in nature and took a more lively interest in the mstter! Mr. Van Santvoord (relieved)—Yes, that's about it.

Mr. Van Santvoord then gave a pen picture of the scene at Mrs. Hoyt's house when he and Samuel and Mr. Van Schalek sent there when the summons and citations in the matter of the will were to be served upon Mrs. Hoyt. The witness later in the day called on Miss Mary Irene Hoyt at the Windsor Hotel, when he handed her a copy of the will, and the clerk of the Surrogate's office served the citations. Mr. Van Santvoord and Mr. Conkling leaned toward each other during this recital and an air of gentality surrounded them. Mr. Conkling grasped the railing with both hands, and tempered his voice and nanner as to the shorn lamb; and the witness in turn became as baimy in disposition as if conversing with his bosom friend. Mr. Conkling then advanced to Mr. Van Santvoord's side, and looked over his shoulder at a memorandam which the witness confidentially held up for the counsel's gaze. Matual smiles played upon the faces of the two members of the bar. Ex-Judge Ship-man was painfully alarmed at this evidence of collasion. He rushed around a pillar and dropped a hint into Mr. Conkling's ear which caused him to straighten up and eye the witness askance. He then said, looking Mr. Van Santvoord through and through:

Bantwood through and through:

Have you made search for sheh memoranda and papers as pertain to this centest? A.—I have not been asked to Mr. Corking in tride stiffy)—That is not my question. A.—Well, no, I have not searched.

Mr. Corkling tholding up a cardl—Is this the first letter you received from Miss Popt after the funeral? A.—I think there was one before. I have handed everything over to Mr. Lood. I did that as soon as I heard there was to be a contest. Miss Hoy's first letter after the citation came from the asylum.

Air. Conkling dimpressively)—Can you give the date of that letter? A.—I cannot. I received it on the day of the citation. I answered it on the same day.

Mr. Conkling thanding the wittness the card)—You see the date is September 8: that is plain, is it not! A.—It may have been another year.

Mr. Conkling—This is a card three-and-one-half inches long.

long. Mr. Van Santvoord-No, about two and-one-half. Why mix me up with distances! Put the eard in evidenox.
Mr. Conkling—Are you not good at distances!
Mr. Van Santvoord (hitching blasself to the other side of the chair)—No.
Mr. Conkling (with an amused expression of face)—
Why, i thought that was your best holt!

Mr. Conkling then sought to find why the witness had kept a copy of his answer to the eard, as only three lines were written upon the card. Mr. Van Santvoord grew excited again, and attempted to go into one of his char-

Mr. Conkling (utervupting)—Now, I object.
Mr. Van Santveerd (growing red in the face)—Well, you see, I wanted to be particular, as I was dealing with ladies—
Mr. Conkling (warmly)—Well, I am not dealing with dies now, unfortantately, but with you.

Mr. Van Santyoord, isitting back in his seath-Exactly. Mr. Van Santyoord next submitted to the Surrogate that one of Mr. Conkling's questions was frivolous. If a man, he said, was so stopid that he could not see so timple a point, he ought not to ask the question.

Mr. Conkling dending low:—If a man is so stund, should you not rather symathize with him instead of condemning him.

MR. CONKLING MAKES AN ERROR. Mr. Conkling then read the card as follows:

51 West Porty-eighth-st. DEAR MR. VAN SANTYOODE: Please let me know where Dear Me. A warm most convenient to yourself.
September 12.
Mr. Van Santvoord—Is that September 121
Mr. Conkling—I beg your pardon, September 8. It was my inistake.

Mr. Van Santvoord (sharply)—Better keep your dates right and make no such blunders.
Mr. Conking—It was a great error, I admit.
The witness stated that on September 8 he had no knowledge that there was to be contest. On September 12 he received a second card, with four lines on it, from Miss Hoyt. He answered it the same day.

Mr. Conkleng—Did you keep a copy of your answer!
Mr. Van Santyoord—If you are coming to such great nicety as that, I made a draft of it, and kept this to copy in a neat hand at my leisure. I keep a copy withindorsements of everything I think worth preserving. I put Miss Hoyt's card away in the Hoyt box.

Mr. Conkling called the witness's attention to the back of the second card, with a memorandum in which the name of Mrs. Lynch was written. The "s" in the Mrs. was written with a different ink from that used for the ther two letters.

Mr. Coukling—Where did you make that memorable in A.—At the desk of the St. Cloud Hotel.

Q.—Have ou not testified that you were at that memorable in September 141 A.—Yes, that was the only day

Q. - Did you not first write that Mr. Lynch and then name it afterward to Mrs. Lynch! A. -No. I made the draft on September 13.

Q.—You received the letter on September 12, and yet on Q.—You received the letter on September 12.

Q.—You received the letter on September 12, and yet on that date you made an engrossment with the date September 13. Can you explain that! A.—Reference to the calcular will show that my letter was written on the thirteenth, and my date of the twelfth was a mistake. You see, I had been up at Woodlawn.

Mr. Conkling impatiently -I object. We may go to Woodlawn, yet, but I hope not before this trial is over. Kow, Mr. Yan Santvoord, was that rard of September 8 from Miss Hoyt the first communication informing you that she had been released from the asylum and had reached, therefore the trial the card not impress you that Miss Hoyt was at home! A.—It made no impression at all. I knew nothing of her being in custody.

Mr. Conkling then pressed his questions to ascertain Mr. Conkling then pressed his questions to ascertain what Mr. Van Santvoord knew about Miss Hoyt's being in custody until the witness leaned forward, and said matter.

Mr. Conkling (angrily)—I will not characterize that answer. I will only say that a more untruthful statement was never made in a court of justice; and yet you have said it four times.

Surrogate Rollins—Strike out the answer.

The witness said that he had heard the suggestion that Miss Hoyt should go to Europe with Mr. and Mrs. Hall, who had charge of the asylum in which Miss Hoyt had been confined. Mr. Van Sautvoord then endeavored to run off on an account of John J. Quackenbush's brother, run off on an account of John J. Quackenbush's brother, but Mr. Conkling drew him up short.

Mr. Conkling—Mr. Quackenbush has appeared and disappeared in a mysterious manner in this will business, has he not:

Mr. Van Santvoord (hotly)—That is an aspersion on his character, and 1—

Mr. Conkling—Now stop!

The Surrogate—Yes, Mr. Van Santvoord.

Mr. Van Santvoord—But if that is not aspersion—
The Surrogate—You must stop.

Mr. Quackenbush, the winess said, was the agent of the executors of Jesse Hoyt's will; he had advised the trip abroad. Mr. Van Santvoord here again said that Mrs. Hoyt had placed ber daughter in the asylum. Mr. Conkiling grew excited and the Surrogate told the witness If he repeated the offence, summary measures would be taken. The witness glared and subsided. He denled that he knew of any plan to send Miss Hoyt abroad with the Halls. Mr. Van Santvoord here went off on another dissertation, and Mr. Conkling looked on in amusement, adding finally :

Well, Mr. Van Santvoord, if you will keep cool new, I shad soon be through with you.

The witness smiled at the prospect, and the hearing was adjourned until to-day.

Justice Van Vorst, in the Supreme Court, dismissed yesterday the suit for limited divorce of Helen M. Johnson against Samuel E. Johnson. The husband set up in defence an alsolute divorce obtained in Massachusetts. Mrs. Johnson asserted that this was not valid, as neither site nor her husband was a resident of that State at the time. Justice Van Vort holds that the Massachusetts court was competent to decide its own jurisdiction, and that Mrs. Johnson had in a legal sense submitted to the authority of that court, and was therefore bound by its decree.

WEDNESDAY, April-2 P. M.

The United States Treasurer's monthly statement of liabilities and assets, as of April 1, shows an increase from the statement of March 1 of the socalled "available balance" of $5,385,001, which is principally due to a decrease of $9,652,007 in the current liabilities other than for outstanding certificates. During the month the Treasury lost $10,-800,000 in gold, but the outstanding gold certificates were reduced $9,000,000, so that its ownership of gold was reduced only $1,778,806; its stock of United States and National bank notes was reduced $4,090,555, and its deposits in National banks were reduced $488,806. On the other hand its store of silver (41212 grains) dollars was increased $2,183,702, and the amount of outstanding silver certificates was reduced $328,145; so its ownership of silver dollars was increased $2,511,747; the stock of silver bullion ($5,043,825, two and one-half months' supply under the coinage act) was increased $123.-912, and the fractional silver coins ($28,866,556) was increased $375,649; total increase in ownership of all kinds, $3,011,408.

In our usual form we present an analysis of the Treasurer's statement of April 1, 1884, as fol-

The stock speculation to-day again developed a weak tone. The opening of business was made at barely steady figures; a small decline from first prices was followed by a quick and sharp rally, and that by a later general shrinkage in values that was modified at the close by a small recovery. The total transactions for the day amounted only to 222,819 shares, against 341,939 shares yesterday. A feature of the market was the borrowing demand for Lake Shore, which made the certificates worth from 1-16 to 3-16 per cent per diem for use, because the transfer books will close to-morrow for both the quarterly dividend and annual election of directors, Yet the price of the stock, after 1024@10178@10238 for early sales, declined to 1007s and ended at 1014. The books of the Delaware, Lackawanua and Western to-day closed for the quarterly dividend of 2 per cent without developing any scarcity of the stock; the early prices ruled at 124@12414; later sales were made at 1231s@12314. and ex dividend at 1297s #121. St. Paul and Union Pacific were prominent in the dealings, and to some extent influenced the character of the general market; both of them closed within 's per cent of the lowest prices of the day. Northwestern sold down from 1163s to 11514, and after board hours was given out that a plan is on foot to issue about $14,000,000 of stock for the purchase of the stocks of the lowa lines now leased by the Northwestern Company. Western Union was less active than yesterday, and early rallied from 69% to 70%; but it closed at 69%, or 4 botter than last evening. The Northern Pacifics were dull and about steady, but Oregon and Trans-continental declined to 20%. The Southwesterns were weak on small transactions. The market closed dull and weak,

The market for Government bonds was firm, with only a moderate amount of transactions; bids for the 4s were 4s higher. Annexed are the closing quetations:

Buyers are purchasing against the most preasing needs and the increase in receipts has been sufficient to cause a good deal of pressure to sell. Thus far atook has not accumulated to any considerable extent. There is no disposition to hold prices up and receivers are free sellers, meeting buyers promptly. The season is so far advanced that it is only a malter of a short time when values will be declided; lower and it is much better for the fraile in general to have prices settle gradually. To-day the lobbing price of Fancy Elsiu Creamery is not above 35c. and buyers at that figure are scarce. Best brands of Forms i senia are reaching 34c, but very good quality is offering as Extras, are quiet at 3 3634c. Selections from the finest Delaware County Lalfafrik tubs were solid at 35c. and for best invoices 31c. is a full wholesale quotation. We see fine lines selling at 36c. Weish tubs have to be strictly extras to job at 30c. most of the best straight invoices going at 25c. off grades of Dairy are bard to soil and have an oncertain value. Old State butter quiet and ruling a little casier, especially for old diavored stock. Western Imitation Cresarrery and Factory are not plenty but have less call, and tend to lower prices.

The continued dul ness of trade causes more or less presente to seil, and the marked has a weak tone. It is not believed however, that any serious decline can occur, for we have exported too much of our surplus, but during the dull period, which is likely to prevail until browers get well maior way with their summer work, parties who want to realize will have to make some concessions in price, as an inducement to buyers. This is repetably true of grades below Choice, the latter being very scarce may retain a firm position.
